

Me and You

If my world don't amount to much
And if my way it isn't yours, as such
Well who's to say that I won't change
For nothing seems to be the same without you

And if my day it seems to drag a bit
Well don't you leave just on account of it
For given time and strength of mind
Then I'll know for sure a little more about you

But won't you dare to face the truth
Or are you scared that you may waste your youth
Well if you care, there are things to do
While there's no-one here
Just me and you
